Cost basis and unrealized gain/loss information does not reflect intra-day transactions, including trading activity. Fidelity provides cost basis and associated realized gain and loss information to you as a courtesy service. Such information may not reflect all adjustments necessary for tax reporting purposes. You should verify cost basis and corresponding gain/loss information provided by Fidelity against your own records when calculating reportable gain or loss resulting from a sale. You are solely responsible for the accuracy of cost basis and gain/loss information reported to federal, state, and other taxing authorities. Fidelity makes no warranties with respect to, and specifically disclaims any liability arising out of your use of, or any tax position taken in reliance upon, Fidelity-provided cost basis and gain/loss information. Unless otherwise specified, Fidelity determines cost basis at the time of sale based on the first-in, first-out (FIFO) method (for securities other than open-end mutual funds) or the average cost-single category (ACSC) method (for open-end mutual funds). Consult your tax advisor for further information. Please note that holding period information provided by Fidelity does not reflect the "5-Year Long Term Capital Gains" classification, which took effect for certain tax payers on January 1, 2001
