which is said to be losing $75,000 each week. Panola Medical Center operates efficiently, Havens said, and has profits of about $30,000 a week, unless the debt on the West Campus is factored into the equation. With that $5 million loan considered, the hospital is much less attractive to potential buyers.

City and county officials are scheduled to meet again next week to further discuss the future of the hospital.

for 30 years it's terrible," Autrey said. City officials have already begun working with the Panola Partnership to reach out to corporate directors, he said.

Panola Partnership CEO Joe Azar, reached by telephone Wednesday at a national trade show, said his office will rally city and county officials to fight the closure with help from various state and federal economic development offices.

"I don't like this one bit, and we're not going to see these jobs leave Batesville without putting up a fight," Azar said. "I've walked through that plant many times and the work they perform is amazing. The Serta employees here are skilled workers and the quality of their production has never been a question."

Azar said he believes company officials will at least look at proposals to have state grants and low-interest loans offered as incentives to upgrade the plant and possibly change their minds about leaving the area.

"This is a very important industry in our county and we can't afford to lose any jobs," Azar said. "We are hearing that this decision was made as part of a new corporate plan, but we're not giving up until we've had a chance to line up some options and meet with the directors."

Azar said Serta employees have manufactured a great product for many years.

"They are tremendously skilled and are the best at what they do. They have illustrated loyalty, dedication, craftsmanship, and pride in their work," he said.

The economic developer said he has heard, but not confirmed, that Serta officials are blaming the closing on internet sales and have refused to make needed improvements to their Batesville facility to produce a relevant product for that space.

Mayor Autrey said his board will work hard to change minds, and has sent word to all the employees affected by the closing that other opportunities are available locally. "I would encourage them to apply at Blauer and other places because these workers have a lot of experience in the sewing business and are very good."

Azar said he has personally spoken to all the other factories in the county and displaced workers should submit resumes as soon as possible to those places. Blauer (in the old Batesville Casket building) and Insituform especially have production lines that require skilled sewing.

or loose sockets, and make sure they have been tested for safety by an independent testing laboratory. For greater efficiency and safety, use smaller, cool-burning LED lights. Make sure all light sockets have bulbs in them. Children are fascinated by lights and could put their fingers in empty sockets.

Keep bulbs from touching tree branches. Never burn candles on or near the tree and never use flammable decorations.

Never use lights on a metallic tree. If the lights become faulty, the entire tree could be electrified.

Be careful not to overload extension cords, outlets or even whole circuits in the house.

Turn off decorative lighting when you leave the room.

Place wires where they cannot trip anyone. Do not run them under rugs.

OUTSIDE LIGHTING

Make sure the lights used are designated for outdoor use.

Use a non-conducting fiberglass or wooden ladder when working with strings of lights. Also, stay clear of all overhead wires.

Do not replace bulbs when the electricity is on.

Never let light bulbs touch flammable materials such as plastic or dry grass and leaves.

For outside use, work only with three-wire grounded extension cords.

Use rubber gaskets in light sockets or hang sockets downward to keep water out.

Keep connections and lights off the ground by hanging them over wooden stakes. Turn outside holiday lights off when away from home or asleep.
