The insured(s) should determine whether insurance of any other kind is available for any threatened or actual claim and, if there is coverage, please provide prompt and complete notice to the carrier(s) and to us.

We have been advised this is the deductible (or self-insured retention) for this matter, which the Company should confirm with their insurance advisors, independent counsel, or the carrier. The Company should also review the policy's terms, as well as the carrier's coverage letter, regarding any policy terms, any notice requirements and the coverage limits, or sublimits, including whether subject to the aggregate of covered claims which may erode the limit, whether there is a per-claim limit, or otherwise (or if, for example, coverage is only available for defense costs). Jackson Lewis is not providing any advice or representation with regard to the existence or extent of insurance coverage, but simply highlighting areas of concern.*
