Hi Ted,

Unfortunately I do not have an update on your refund request. I apologize!

I am not sure if you received the email that went out Saturday from YW but all studios that are currently open will be closing again tomorrow. There is no set date of when the studios will reopen again. But moving forward if you want to request an update on your refund or if you have any other questions please go through this link https://www.yogaworks.com/contact-us/ as this email will not be monitored after Friday.

Again I do apologize I could not be more of a help and provided an update.

Take care,

I realize that she is not the administrator responsible for processing membership cancellations, but I was a bit surprised when she told me that it would take another 25-30 to process my request. If you scroll down these emails, you'll see that I originally requested to cancel my membership back on July 22, so I'm not sure why the clock to process my cancellation didn't start then or why it take a month to do so. Can you please expedite this process?

I think I have been extremely patient with YogaWorks as far as addressing membership issues dating back to April. Under normal circumstances, I would go to a studio in Playa Vista or South Bay to speak with someone in person, but since that is not an option, I would appreciate it if someone could contact me about the details of cancelling my membership. This should not be that complicated or take this much time to settle.

Hi Jamie,
Neither of those directions is acceptable. I feel like you completely ignored the other email that I sent you. Yenesey said based on your location closures and the three membership freezes that my account as of mid July was good thru December 8, and you can confirm this with her. I assume as an assistant manager, she had the authority to make that call. Also, I have no idea why your records don't show a third freeze from mid December to mid January, but as I said before, you can see that I had no activity during that period, so why am I being penalized now for incomplete records? At a minimum, I should be getting a refund for three months, not three weeks, and nowhere does it say that the promo months are on the front end of the term vs the back end, so if you are being fair, it should really be four if not five months as I pointed out in my last email. Besides all that though, are you now ignoring what Yenesey told me in July, which was that I had almost five months left on my membership? I assume that would have been documented by her on your system, but in any case, I'm copying her on this email too since she was involved with this process before corporate dropped the ball.
